Feng Shui Vancouver - Literally the translation of Feng Shui the oriental concept means "wind and water." The concepts are more easily understood with experience that it is defined or pronounced. Feng Shui needs to be experienced in order to fully understand its ramifications on the human spirit. The elusive energy called chi is ever existing and surrounds the application and the meaning of Feng Shui. While it is elusive, chi is all over in the universe and is considered one's aesthetic periphery. Feng Shui reveals itself in our outlook about landscape and concerning life. It is the framework we place either unconsciously or consciously all-around our lives.

According to the cultures in the Orient, object positioning like for example buildings, graves and furniture is based on the patterns established through the flow of chi and yin and yang. Together, yin and yang energies generate both positive and negative effects. Feng Shui is made up of five elements. These elements are known as fire, earth, wood, water and metal. They combine in their own specific ways to generate either positive or destructive cycles. In order for optimum Feng Shui to be obtained within whichever room, all of the five elements would be included without being overpowered by whichever one of them individually.

For example, if metal elements as in contemporary furniture pieces dominate an area, the effect could be balanced by introducing wood elements to the room such as green plants. Candles can likewise be integrated in order to form the fire component. When implementing Feng Shui as a design feature within anyone's house, it is essential to utilize natural substances when possible. The dual aspects of yin and yang always reign supreme in Feng Shui in view of the fact that the ultimate objective is to produce a harmonious balance between natural items and humans.

The bedroom is considered amongst the most important rooms in whatever home. The bedroom is vital to the flow of energy all through the home. Beds themselves are believed to have power positions as well. Several ancient Asian philosophy believe that the energy from somebody who ever slept in a bed leaves a residue. For optimum Feng Shui, the way the bed is placed in relation to the bedroom door must be considered. The door should always be visible from the bed. If the door is not visible from the bed, anyone could make use of a mirror in such a way that it would reflect the door. This will restore Feng Shui.

Feng Shui links life and landscape together and all things in life depend upon each other. The Oriental way of thinking believes the landscape is a breathing and living entity. There are various aspects about earth and humanity and heaven that the Western world can think about as people in the east do. Like as Shakespeare said in Hamlet, "There are more things in heaven and earth, my dear Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy."
